TESTIMONIALS

"Becky is great to work with - she's hard-working, friendly and reliable. We work with Becky on a lot of events and she captures so much content; a fab selection of photos, lots of tweets and Instagram stories and her blogs are always live within a couple of days. We like the authentic voice behind BeckyBecky Blogs and we really appreciate that Becky is honest about only attending events which she knows are right for her blog audience - it means that when we do work together, we know that she's really passionate about that particular event or client and this always follows through in her content".

- Louise Jackson Rogers, PR Executive for I Like Press

"We approached Becky to participate in one of our experiences. Becky's online presence and enthusiasm, was a vital part of us gaining followers and attention. We will be using Becky in the future and see her as a real advocate and asset to what we do now at Riptide. Becky is not only a very talented storyteller and blogger but she is also really great to work with - often going above and beyond!"

- Alexander Palmer, Founder and Artistic Director for Riptide

PROFILE

Hi there! I blog about a wide range of gaming hobbies and interests, including escape rooms, megagames, immersive events, mystery games and geek culture.

I approach all aspects of life with a geeky enthusiasm and love exploring new things. My blogs are characterised by being both entertaining and well-researched.

TESTIMONIALS CONT.

"Becky is an important influencer in the world of megagames, particularly in social media and especially through her blog, which is widely read and extensively shared in the community. Not only that, she is a capable and important exemplar of the new generation of megagame designers who are pushing out the scope of games and exploring the genre more fully. As one of the few female megagame designers Becky influences and encourages other female designers with her enthusiasm and truly excellent megagame designs."

- Jim Wallman, authority figure in megagaming and designer of Watch The Skies
